

Gwendolyn Kardos

Jennings Elementary school

Grade 5

What if the Earth could speak?

If the Earth could speak, or at least whisper when a single human being makes the wrong decision, what our eyes see today would not look, nor be, the same. Imagine if the junk yards were beautiful plants that provided shade and shelter for the animals that need it. All people would listen to the good wise Earth, because the Earth had been thriving, and alive, since the beginning of time as we know it. Pollution would have never existed; the Earth surely never wanted there to be such a thing. We would not have been able to stop the dinosaurs from extinction, but there are other animals that would still be alive, if the Earth could speak.

If the Earth could speak, or at least whisper when a single human being makes the wrong decision, there would be no trash. Humans would have thought of recycling earlier than they did, with some help from the Earth. And because of that, there would be even more nature around us. The birds and bees and fish would all be common and seen almost every day. There would be ten times the amount of chirps from the birds than there are now, and one hundred times the amount of happy animals. Imagine what would happen, if the Earth could speak.

If the Earth could speak, or at least whisper when a single human being makes the wrong decision, there would be no such thing as wrong decisions. No destroying nature, no extinction of animals, no global warming, all because of the poor choices humans have made. We humans would have an Earth we cannot even imagine today, if the Earth could speak.

But because the Earth cannot speak, cannot whisper, and cannot even whistle, we are the Earth's only voice. Let's make the world a better place for all human beings, because we can speak.